"Washington has increasingly cominto prominence as a shopping center," said President R. P. Andrews, of the Retail Merchants' Association, in his annual report, delivered at the initial meeting of the year held last night in the quarters of the association, 1202 F street

There was a big attendance when, in addition to the reports of the president, treasurer and secretary, considerable business of a routine nature was trans-

"The Retail Merchants' Association "The Retail Merchants' Association comes naturally into the prestige which it now enjoys," said President Andrews. "Commercially Washington is logically a retail center, and since this is an age of specialization it behooves the retailers of Washington to take advantage of the wonderful opportunity which this condition affords.

"Of all the elements of commerce and intercommunication between people there tercommunication between people there none that is more personal than the lations between the retailer and the ensumer. The retailer and the consumer are natural dependents to another, and it is gratifying to note the cordial relationship that exists between the consumers and merchants of Wash-ington. This is due to the high plane of stability and integrity on which the pub-lic and the merchant deal with one another here in the National Capital, It is an axiom that once a firm has become established in the retail trade in Washington its future is secure."

Reviewed Year's Work.

President Andrews reviewed the asso-ciation's work along the lines of freight and transportation, the committee on employment, and the campaign for better lighting on business streets He also paid a tribute to the news-papers, saying: "Newspapers here in Washington give their columns (which chants' Association appreciate the lib-erality of our dally newspapers."

President Andrews recommended the establishment of a credit men's section in connection with the Retail Mer-chants' Association, to be made up of credit men whose firms are identified with the association.

The report was adopted and ordered printed for distribution to the member-ship.

The report of Treasurer E. C. Graham showed the association to be in a healthy condition financially. Secretary Columbus gave a summary of the number of meet-ings held by the association, its sections,
